

BIO-NOTE:

Born to a family of theatre practitioners and painters, Ashes was inherently inspired to think of the world in terms of colours. As he grew up, he took to the brush quite naturally. This passion for colours, both on and off canvas, prompted him to pursue a theoretical formulation of colour-usage- colour response application in textual space for his doctoral thesis. His love for the North East of India, his homeland, has been the stimulus behind much of his academic and critical work ranging from situating Mamang Dai's poetry in an authentic NE philosophic and aesthetic paradigm, to analyzing the mnemonics of recall in refugee oral narratives and comprehending the plebian banter at work in subverting divinity as a remote construct in popular dance performances of Gajan and Charak by the subalterns. As a professor in the department of English, Tripura University, Ashes has been trying to promote NE literature and culture persistently. In his capacity as a documentary film maker on aspects of NE and Tripura, he has created a rich audio-visual archive of lesser known aspects of his homeland and its myriad cultural nuances. His academic endeavor has been to interrogate the notion of perceived marginality attributed to the North East and to counter such 'mainstream motives' by circumscribing an academic and cultural space with NE as the centre.

Having widely travelled Ashes has represented the NE and Tripura across various Literary fests such as Goa Art and Literature Fest; Kaziranga Lit. Fest. and Rivertalks, Guwahati; World Book Fair, N. Delhi; Converse, Gangtok; Matrubhumi International Festival of Letters, Thiruvananthapuram; Odisha Art and Literature Festival, Bhubaneswar to name a few. Having written his first research article on Toni Morrison's The Bluest Eye for the National Seminar on Toni Morrison in March 1994 as a 3rd Semester PG student of Department of English, University of Hyderabad (that later got published in 1996 in an anthology edited by his teacher Prof. Alladi Uma), his literary works include Colourscapes: Theorising Colours, The Fragrant Joom- Translation of Modern Kokborok Poetry to English, The Fragrant Joom Revisited: A Translation of Modern Kokborok Poetry to English; The Mystic Mountain: An Anthology of Tripura Bangla Poetry in English, The Golden Rendezvous, Phoenix etal. His areas of interest comprise of Indian English Writing, NE Writing, Culture and Aesthetics, Popular Literature and Culture, Films and Performance. A few of his significant documentaries are Vanaaj: In Search of Green; Doibee: An Encounter with the Gods; Fading Melodies: Ethnic Musical Instruments of Tripura and Tripura State Museum: A Curtain Raiser. Ashes ardently believes that it his responsibility to initiate a different telling about his homeland- a land much misunderstood and maligned, where, inspite of the aroma of gunpowder and alien glances, love still sprouts like a chethuang sapling in the corners of lush green hills, khumpui and kherengbar's bloom and his kinsmen trace their lazy steps back home in bronze evenings.
