Concept Note

Among those who envisioned literature as a living instrument of human struggle, Mahasweta Devi emerges as a singular and compelling voice. Her writing rises from the pulse of lived realities, where words become acts of resistance and compassion.

In the second half of the twentieth century—a time marked by the intensification of economic, social, political, and cultural crises, and by a growing disillusionment with institutional structures that drove people to seek new paths—Mahasweta Devi began her literary journey. She made the struggle for survival of marginalized communities the central concern of her writing. Consequently, her novels and short stories bring together a multitude of voices belonging to the neglected and the oppressed.

In the modern world, women's life struggles constituted another crucial area of her thought. Rather than maintaining a distance from public life, she devoted a substantial part of her life to living and working among marginalized communities, with the objective of creating literature in the truest sense of people's literature and of defending the social rights of those left behind.

On the occasion of the centenary of such a distinguished writer, we seek to revisit her life and literary contributions. To mark this occasion, the Department of Bengali, Tripura University, is organizing a two-day National Seminar on 12th and 13th January, 2026.
