NATIONAL SEMINAR
on DECOLONISING THE INDIAN MIND: EXPLORING POSSIBILITIES

Organized by

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIOLOGY
TRIPURA UNIVERSITY
(A CENTRAL UNIVERSITY)

March 15-16, 2019

DECOLONISING THE INDIAN MIND: EXPLORING POSSIBILITIES

CONCEPT NOTE OF THE SEMINAR

Mahatma Gandhi's 'Hind Swaraj' is a significant and outstanding vision on decolonizing the Afro-Asian countries. However, Gandhi's vision for Swaraj seems to be elusive as even after seventy years of independence, our country has not been able to free itself from the colonial structures. Although India acquired political independence decades ago, our minds still remain colonized. Through the practices emanating from the colonized mind, we reproduce and reinforce the colonial structures and ideology. The remnants of imposed norms of colonialism coerce our everyday life and activity in multiple ways. The political hegemony established by the colonizers has left behind colonial mode of knowledge and an entrenched colonial worldview. As we know, colonial arrogance was partly driven by colonizer's faith in Western modernity rooted in reason and science; often the colonial Weltanschauung rooted in science was pitched against the native's Weltanschauung rooted in religious dogmas, faith and beliefs.

Colonial rule deeply impacted the national character and various mechanisms were deployed by colonial masters to assert and legitimize the civilizational superiority in the name of 'civilizing' mission and, as a result the colonial rule was justified as a white man's burden to civilize the barbaric East. The process of colonialism, in Ashish Nandy's words, 'helps generalize the concept of modern West from a geographical and temporal entity to a psychological category'. In the long drawn colonial rule and, thereafter, colonized developed an inferiority complex and redefine themselves through the colonial lenses. Unfortunately, this trend continues and, at times, with greater acceleration in post-Independence India, to reaffirm the colonial Weltanschauung as reflected in the westoxicated narratives heavily drawn on western concepts and philosophical traditions.

Aim of this seminar is not to exclude or ignore each and every aspect of colonial heritage. The spirit is that, as Gandhi once remarked, 'I do not want my house to be walled on all sides and my windows to be stuffed. I want the cultures of all the lands to be blown about my house as freely as possible. But I refuse to be blown off my feet by any of them'. Similar, concerns were reflected in Bal Gangadhar Tilak's conception of 'Swaraj'. Tilak ardently affirmed that the greatness of future rests on the greatness of past. A nation can't attain glory by disowning its past and mindlessly following the colonizers. Tilak believed that India's strength lies in its religious fervor and spirituality. There has been an abiding concern regarding the issue of 'decolonization' in modern Indian social thought.

OBJECTIVES OF THE SEMINAR

The proposed seminar is a prelude to engage with the colonial constructs that rules Indian mindset. The main objectives of the are-

- To interrogate how both historically and contemporarily certain normative conception of legitimate culture, values, beliefs, and practices exhibiting the reminisce of colonialism enter into our everyday life and, at times manifest or latently exhibits contempt for culture, values, beliefs, and practices that are Indian.
- To look at how a conscious attempt on the part of colonizers to create a consensus that was absent, has now become the only feasible interpretation of social and intellectual possibilities.
- To understand how everyday life in India is governed by the 'cultural arbitrariness' of the colonial times and, in such a scenario, citizens continues to suffer 'symbolic violence' in their own country. When this everyday reality is juxtaposed to the idea of 'freedom', it is worth examining, whether we have attained freedom in true senses.

This seminar proposes to engage with the dialectics of hope and despair, challenges and possibilities. Hope here represents the possibility inherent in the indigenous thoughts and tradition; whereas despair reckons with the captive minds rooted and engrossed with the colonial mindset, values and beliefs- attempting to harvest Indian fruits from Western seeds. While taking a critical and reflexive stance at the contemporary Indian scenario, the proposed seminar would examine the possibility and feasibility of decolonizing Indian mind and exploring possibilities to realise the true potential of our nation. It will be a collective attempt, to revisit the categories through which we view our culture and contribute in creating a spiritually elevated Indian society.

SUB-THEMES OF THE SEMINAR

- Rediscovering India's Culture and Civilization through Indigenous Epistemology
- Decolonization and the Idea of Nationalism in Post-Independent India
- Genesis, Prognosis and Practice of Hind Swaraj
- Deconstructing the Nexus of Knowledge and Power in Contemporary India
- Decolonizing methodology for resurgence of research

OVERVIEW

We are living in an important time in the history of this planet, a juncture that will define what history books of the future will depict. The story, about our relationship to Mother Bhumi (Sanskrit for Mother Earth), will either describe a phenomenal transformation or a tragically wasted opportunity. Climate change is no longer an abstract concept, it is a harsh reality. India as a nation has undergone many transformations in the past three decades – from a struggling agrarian economy into a booming technological power house. In the race to catch up with other advanced economies, India has been repeating the same mistakes as others, compromising its ecological health and biodiversity for economic prosperity. But now, the impact of climate change is hitting it hard. More than 60% of the population is dependent on climate sensitive sectors. Water scarcity is hard hitting all places as ground water is become over draft and rivers are drying across India. This global water crisis is one we cannot escape.

Hindu sacred texts, the Vedas, explain how divinity manifests in the form of the creation, and how every element in creation, the Pancha Maha Bhutas – Bhumi (earth), Gagan (sky), Vayu (air), Agni (fire) and Neer (water) are held sacrosanct. For millennia the Indian society followed this eco-centric philosophy and had love, affection, respect and passion for the elements. It is quite common to see rivers, mountains, forests, and even plants and animals considered holy in India. Traditional customs, practices, and lifestyle have been centered on such eco-centric values. At its very heart, respectfully of nature, we can create a meaningful development model.

These traditional values are slowly diminishing. As Albert Einstein once said, "We cannot solve our problems with the same level of thinking that created them". So it is time to elevate our level of thinking by fostering these eco-centric perspectives for finding solutions to climate change and creating models of sustainable development. We as human beings must think and adopt the lifestyle where these Divine elements and their sustenance is not interfered. We must adopt the best practices to accomplish our desires with good actions, and embed them into our very culture and lifestyle. We must pledge that we do not interfere with the divine and move on this Shrusti (creation) with harmony. Thus, understanding the geographic nature and river system eco-friendly, policies need to be formulated along with mass awareness campaigns for judicious use of water.

VISION:

1. This workshop shall be centred around creating a sustainable development model in line with the river Policy perspectives;
2. The developmental model adopted worldwide today, with the use of technology for exploiting nature, has resulted in climate change. This model appears to be unacceptable unless the impacts are mitigated by adoption of natural processes. With expert guidance of Dr Rajendra Singh, we shall assist to develop a development model by adopting all the required technologies which are in line with the great Indian heritage for development trends; and
3. The outreach of the program shall empower the North-East region to gradually adopt development model.

THEME OF THE WORKSHOP

1. Water, Water conservation and Rivers Rejuvenation
2. Waste Water treatment, Recycle, Reuse
3. Solid Waste Management
4. Natural Farming
5. Perspective for efficient River Policies for Sustainable Development

The objective of the University is not only to disseminate and advance knowledge by providing instructional and research facilities in the state in areas of contemporary relevance to the society and the country but to make special provisions for studies in tribal life and culture and to introduce vocational subjects with a view to provide employment opportunities to the students. A total number of 42 courses run under the University, which includes Certificate Courses, Under Graduate, Post Graduate Diploma and Post Graduate Studies. In addition to these, Ph.D programmes are also offered in 33 subjects. The number of affiliated Colleges at present is 46 among which there are 23 General Degree Colleges, 17 Professional Colleges, 4 Paramedical and Nursing Colleges and 2 Medical Colleges.

ABOUT AVIRAL GANGA MISSION, JAL BIRADARI

Tarun Bharat Sangh's efforts of organizing the villages and local communities across the country have resulted in the formulation of the Rashtriya Jal Biradari (National Water Community). Then started the water movement regarding water rights and to establish communities right over water. The responsibility of leading the movement was given to Rajendra Singh (chairman RJB). Dr Rajendra Singh has been conferred with Magsaysay Awardee & Stockholm Water Prize. He is popularly known as Jalpurush water man of India.

RJB has its units in each state of the country. It is working on national level issues like influencing Central & State governments for making pro-people water policies, decentralized community driven water management, advocacy against privatization of natural resources, creating awareness among general mass for water conservation. At present RJB focusing on "Save the Rivers Mission". Recently, due to persistent efforts of RJB, River Ganga has been recognized as "National River" by Government of India. Moving ahead, RJB is trying to bring stakeholder of polity & community on common platform for dialogue to save Rivers from pollution, excess exploitation and encroachment.

Ayiral Ganga Mission is inspired by Dr GD Agarwal fasting unto death sacrifice for revival of Maa Ganga. The mission is being lead for different regions by Convenor for the region under the overall leadership of Jalpurush Dr Rajendra Singh ji. The aim is to stop further huge dam constructions and promote check dam concept and make initiatives to reduce inter and intra state conflicts for water distribution by promoting water literacy programmes and mobilize all stakeholders for direct involvement. Finding solutions to water crisis by integrated approach. The main objective is to do Ganga Sadbhavna yatra from Kashmir to Kanyakumari to create awareness among public, conduct river literacy programme, and work with water authorities by providing guidelines to create apt policies and restructure archival ones. This Yatra is done in first phase from Gomukh to Ganga Sagar. Report: Department of Sociology successfully organized a workshop on “ETHNOGRAPHIC RESEARCH IN EDUCATION” on 16 September, 2020. The theme is based on Ethnographic research, where it has become one of the most fashionable research methods in the humanities and social sciences. But it is also misunderstood.

Department of Sociology, Tripura University (A Central University), Suryamaninagar - 799022, Tripura (W), INDIA

Phone: (0381) 237 9249, 237 9250, Fax: (0381) 237 4802, website:www.tripurauniv.in

In this workshop we look at a number of central issues in ethnographic research, from theoretical, epistemological and ethical questions to practical challenges to do with how to go about ethnographic fieldwork. We consider: what does it mean to carry out ethnographic research? How can it be done rigorously? How can it be defended against accusations that it is an entirely subjective engagement with the object of research? Is reflexivity a panacea for such criticisms? We begin by addressing the origins of ethnographic method and what are considered to be its unique and most powerful attributes, in comparison with questionnaire, survey- or interviewbased research. We then consider the practice of fieldwork: choosing a site, dealing with gatekeepers, creating the necessary background knowledge before fieldwork, rigour in fieldwork, the politics of fieldwork, and epistemological concerns raised in relation to ethnography. We move on to consider Rabinow's idea of ethnography as a response to Foucault's 'problematization', and as a way of implementing what, after Deleuze, might be called a post-positivist empiricism – an empiricism with potentially inventive conceptual effects. We continue by examining the conjunction of ethnographic practice and analysis in light of Bourdieu's field theory and Foucault's notion of difference as a methodological principle. We alight on the problem of how to bring ethnographic research into methodological relation with history and diachrony; again, Foucault's work is productive here, but genre theory is also a powerful means of addressing the theorisation of both stability or stasis and invention in cultural, social and discursive systems.

We come to reflexivity and consider how ethnography has been refigured in recent decades in response to epistemological and political critique. We look briefly at techniques like multi-site ethnography and online ethnography, which are renewing ethnographic method in the present, posing important new ethical and epistemological challenges. Anyone interested in carrying out ethnographic research, or intending to do so, particularly on cultural production – whether in relation to music, media, art or interdisciplinary practices – is encouraged to attend, to read some of the below and to bring along questions to the workshop.

An outreach program of Bio-NEST NIPER-Guwahati in collaboration With the Department of Forestry and Biodiversity, Tripura University, Agartala, Tripura

1. Brief write up about the Outreach program

Outreach program in the different state of North East India conducted by Bio-NEST NIPER-Guwahati Incubation Center to create the awareness and encouragement among the students, researchers, traditional healers, and other potential candidates to come up as an entrepreneur. The main objective is to develop an entrepreneurship ecosystem in NER which is also a goal of BIRAC-DBT, so that the huge bio-resource of NER can be utilized in a sustainable manner and subsequently develop the economy of the region. It is well known that there is no dearth of ideas among the fellow Indians, but the main problems are Mindset, Mentoring, Money and the Market Access. Through this program, we are trying to change the mindset and come up as an incubatee, so that, we can mentor them, help them to get a grant from different funding agencies to develop the product, and connect them with proper stakeholder to access the market.

2. What is the utility

The biotech/ healthcare sector startups need incubation support of a different kind. They need a place for developing the prototype of their products by having access to high-end laboratory equipment, and also mentorship and support on technical, regulatory, and financial aspects. Bio-NEST NIPER Guwahati with its state of the art instrument facility and the pool of mentors from the different field is providing that support to the incubatee in their project. Through this outreach program, we are trying to create the attitude of the participants to come forward and transform their dream in reality. They can contact Bio-NEST, NIPER-Guwahati at any moment for support.

3. How Local people will be beneficial

The students, researchers, traditional healers and budding entrepreneurs of Tripura can incubate their innovative ideas/products at the center and can develop their venture/ company. The experts from Tripura may join as mentors/advisers so that incubatees become more confident to come up as innovators. These incubatees will come up as a successful entrepreneur and will become an employer instead of job seekers and contribute to the economic development of the region. The center is also open for students from other parts of North Eastern organization, startup companies, and qualified citizens with Bio/ Pharma/ health care related subjects to incubate there project.

4. Any recent scope of work?
